“ I was blessed to have two moms. She was one of them. Our lives will never be the same. I am so heartbroken.

She was always doing everything she could for everybody to help. It didn't matter how tired she was or what she had going on. She always found a way to be there for those that needed her.

She told me just a few days ago I was her best friend. We had coffee in the mornings before the kids would go to school. She loved her family with everything she had in her. I hope to carry that on with my children.

Some of the best advice she ever gave me was that you can't expect other people to do what you would do. She was certainly right. It has gotten me through many things.

This photo is from when we went to the beach a couple of years ago. I'm so thankful for the time we had. I feel blessed to have known her. She was a light for so many.

Grief is not knowing where to send your love for someone. It's truly heartbreaking. She treated me like I was her own and there was never a difference. She had sons but she often told me I was the daughter that wasn't born to her.

I know she is at peace and resting now. There is always a plan from above we don't know about. She's with the angels. There is no other place that would be suiting. I know she will watch over us.

I pray for strength and understanding while our family goes through this. I'm not sure it is something that we will ever truly heal from.
