SACRIFICE. The story I have to tell started on December 23, 1963, the day Kenny Bagwell was born. By the age of 14 he had to work full-time in order to raise his brother and sisters.

He worked some of this hardest and hottest jobs around and he never once complained about having to drop out of school and give up a "normal" childhood to care for his family. Soon after, he married my mom, and they had two daughters with disabilities (even then he didn't complain). Together they raised my sisters and me to the best of their abilities. We lost my sister, Jessica, a few years ago but they continued to take the best care of Jerica they could. Not only did he take care of his immediate family but also extended family as well. He loved helping his family and anyone else for that matter. He was the "Rip" of our family coming in to resolve the problem. Everyone knew they could trust and know he would do what he said. He was a giver at heart, providing cars, horses, go-karts and many other items to anyone that needed it. My dad was my biggest supporter. I never had to worry about any new endeavors succeeding, I know he would be there to help in any way he could.
