“ Aunt Dora was always a very special person. Our mother Ruth, her sister, loved her dearly. They shared a life together and a history that made them both very strong people. Growing up during the Great Depression gave them true grit. They were brides on the homefront during WWII and suffered through the lean years that followed. They each raised two children and lived to see two generations of descendants. They both outlived their spouses by many years. One common interest was gardening and they both excelled at that brightening many corners with flowers and plants. I'm sure God has a special place for them where they are joined by all their loved ones and the circle will be unbroken. Linda Mills
