“ About 35 years ago, Perry worked part time on my cattle/chicken farm. It had been an "if it can go wrong, it will" day, as all farmers understand. After working from 5:00 a.m. the previous morning, we finally got things under control about 3:00 a.m. and tried to head home. Perry's red/white pickup wouldn't start so, since he was living with his mom at Walter, we decided to drive to my house and he could take my truck home. On a pig trail road, in pitch black, Perry was leaned against the passenger door about half asleep when, for the first time, John Anderson's "Just a Swingin'" came on the radio. We looked at each other as if our exhaustion was causing hallucinations. Laughing hysterically, he reached over and turned it up. We both laughed with tears rolling. From that point on, anytime work and frustration were getting us down, one of us would break into "Swingin'" to lighten the mood. It will forever bring a smile. His wonderful sense of humor, infectious grin, and work ethic only served to show the world the amazing man he was inside. Swing high, my friend.
