“No words can express the sadness of learning of our friend Rex's passing. No words seem to be able to provide comfort or peace to all those who loved him. Rex was a stand-up person who always treated me with respect when I would fish bass and club tournaments with my husband Randy. It was sometimes tough being out there among all those professionals and lifelong fisherman but Rex was always encouraging and positive to this newbie. It has been many years since I last saw him in a tourney but he is the kind of person that you just remember and no doubt a master in his field. I heard his praises wherever I went in the fishing world. He did what he enjoyed and what made him happy and that was a true blessing in life. I so pray that his family and loved ones find peace and strength with time and always feel his love for them. Never forget that every wave and every sunrise and sunset is Rex saying that he is still here and loves you. Below is a poem that may help the heart grieve by knowing that Rex is not really gone and being able to celebrate the big, beautiful life that man lived. We all loved him and respected him. You have our sincere condolences. Marathon Bassmasters Club would surely agree for all who knew and fished with Rex. Big hugs and lots of love.

Heaven's Fishing Hole: by Jill Eisnaugle

*"For years, the riverbank was where
Your soul felt most at peace
Your heart was most content when there
With the fish and the geese
But then, your spirit came to rest
Where angels chose to roam
And once equipped with ten pound test
You made yourself at home.*

The sky became your deep blue sea

*The clouds became your shore
And there, for all eternity
You sat with friends galore
Each angel was a fisherman
Who had traded his pole
For golden wings and a game plan
At Heaven's Fishing Hole.*

*The tales you told about each catch
Its stature and its girth
Will live in memories unmatched
As days pass here on earth
Until we meet again, one day
Upon God's golden sand
We'll picture you, no other way
Than with a pole in hand."*
