“ Sarah Woods. The first thing that comes to my mind is, her smile, laughter unending love and help for others. She had a servants heart and she loved God and praise worship servics. Sometimes during worship we would just be so into the music and feeling the holy Spirit.

I have known Sarah for 8 years and met her because she was taking care of my husband's aunt and uncle. After my husband passed away I had to go on dialysis and it was not easy. No matter what Sarah was doing she made sure I had something to eat, my house was clean and would sit with me while she could. My family has learned to love and admire her too. She was their lifeline to me when they couldn't reach me by phone , they would call Sarah and she would tell them I was ok that she had stopped by earlier or she would come down and check on me and call them back. She was definitely a God sent to me and my family.

About 2 months ago we became roommates and we just clicked together. There were times of course I would say "Sarah sit down you are wearing me out!". She always had to be doing something. I am honored and blessed to have had Sarah in my life she brought sunshine and laughter to my world when things were dark around me. She has an amazing "church" family here that has been in contact everyday to check on her and have prayed and prayed over her and all of her family.

To her family thanks for sharing her with me. My life is so much richer knowing Sarah and having her as one my best friends.

To Allison, jonathan, and kids your momma and Nana loved you guys so much

You were her world.

To all of you here today let's not mourn over Sarah's death for she has made it to her final destination and I know she is content, happy and pain frees today and is face to face with her Father. This is a celebration of her life...just remember, her laughter, smiles and encouragement she always had for us. She would not want us to be sad but to know we will one day be reunited...

“ Well I didn't know Sarah very long but somehow there is a big feeling of loss kind of a hole in my heart I can't explain. Every member of my family she came in contact with she made an impression on them. Little Otis,Austin, Lori,me,just everyone. She took care of my aunt and uncle for years not for the money for sure but she loved them and wanted to help all she could. Sarah was a kind giving soul and I know God has his arms wrapped around her right now! God bless her.
