“ I remember the puffy dress-up dress you made me and the navy blue wool jacket with those beautiful buttons and the plaid skirt. I remember how you would let me comb and brush your hair for hours. I remember how you would patiently pour two glasses of coke exactly so Ryan and I wouldn't fight over who got more. I remember your laugh, your gentle spirit, and your strength to face the road bumps in your path. I remember how tan you would get when we would go to Pamama City. I remember how you would go along with Mom and some of her crazy schemes, kinda like Lucy and Ethel.

Most of all I remember a good, kind-hearted generous person who always made me feel loved. The English language lacks the words to properly describe you. You will be missed.

Love,
Toni
